

I think mandating copy protection on HDTV is bad. I will not buy a tv that has this protection installed unless a technical "workaround" is (inevitably) developed to allow me to defeat this constraint. Certainly running a HDTV signal through a computer, possibly having to decode the signal, and changing a singal paramater in the stream (broadcast flag) is not overly difficult as to prevent a solution from being developed.